Administrative History

In 1972 Academic Vice President Hobert Burns officially established the Women's Studies Program (WSP) at San José State University. An ad hoc committee was formed and included Dr. Fauneil (Fanny) Rinn of the Political Science Department, Dr. Billie Jensen of the History Department, and Dr. Sybil Weir of the English Department. With the rise of campus protests against traditional academic curriculum and the earlier success of the African American Studies Program, the SJSU Administration readily supported the formation of the WSP. The combined efforts of the Administration, faculty, and students launched one of the first women's studies programs in the U.S.

Under the administrative authority of the Dean of Undergraduate Studies, the WSP became a multi-disciplinary program, offering a minor in Women's Studies, a Social Science M.A. with an emphasis in Women's Studies, and a Social Science B.A. with an emphasis in Women's Studies. As course enrollment continued to grow, the WSP obtained a Teaching Service Area, which led to the appointment of tenure-track professor, Dr. Carol Christ.

Like other women studies programs, the SJSU program worked to solidify its place as an academic discipline. When the National Women's Studies Association first formed in San Francisco in 1977, the WSP organized the professional association's founding convention, which drew close to two thousand participants. The WSP went on to organize and convene other conferences on women's studies, including the 1982 "Higher Education for Women in the 1980s Conference." This conference brought together educators from the northern CSU campuses to discuss furthering women's studies education. At the same time, the WSP produced a significant body of interdisciplinary scholarship, from monographs, newsletters, conference papers, scholarly journal articles, newspaper articles, textbooks, and children's books.

During the 1980s, the WSP, like many other university programs, felt pressure from increasing financial cutbacks and reduced faculty allocations, while still attempting to sustain its curricular responsibilities. At this time, the WSP courses included several general education classes and had high enrollment rates. In 1981 they proposed the establishment of a B.A and, in 1987, an M.A. in women's studies, but without success. In 1987, the WSP, along with African American Studies, Mexican American Studies, Asian American Studies, and Sociology, were combined together into a working consortium under the administration of the College of Social Science. Contention soon followed because the new formation did not allow the individual programs representation in the Academic Senate, and especially on that body's Curriculum Committee. After a series of administrative realignments, the WSP became a part of the Social Science Department under the College of Social Sciences; though African American Studies, Mexican American Studies and Sociology formed separate departments.

The Women's Studies Program continues to offer a multidisciplinary curriculum balancing the traditional academic and male-centered perspective with new research and study in the field of women's experience.

Series I: Administrative Records 1970-1997

Physical Description: 5 record cartons

Series Scope and Content Summary

This series documents the administrative history and organization of the Women's Studies Program, highlighting the formation and development of the program. The collection includes files on university and department committees, correspondence, administrative manuals and policy guides, annual reports and program evaluations, financial records, personnel files, and files on the program's history. The development of women's studies as an academic discipline is an important part of the administrative history of the university, but is also an important part of the history of modern feminism. Despite the political and social backlash to feminism and feminist theory, women's studies scholarship continues to thrive and programs across the U.S. provide important access to a truly multi-disciplinary program focused on the experiences of women across time. What was once considered controversial is now part of the mainstream curriculum. Researchers interested in the historical development of women's studies as an academic discipline, and specifically those interested in documenting the program at SJSU, will find this collection very useful.

Arrangement

This series is arranged alphabetically by format and subject, and is delineated by date.

Series Scope and Content Summary

The bulk of this series documents the Women's Studies Program core curriculum. Researchers interested in documenting the development and multi-disciplinary focus of the WSP will find the course curriculum materials particularly useful. Arranged alphabetically by discipline these records document the subject range, which include courses in the humanities, social science, athletics, science and math, and directly relate to women's issues and experiences. In addition to the courses taught, the files also include course syllabi, course flyers, class handouts and readings, exams, course evaluations, and enrollment statistics.

Arrangement

This series is arranged alphabetically by format and subject, and is delineated by date. Between 1977 and 1985, some of the course numbers changed. The arrow symbol "-->" is used to identify the change in course number (i.e. a folder entitled Social Science 196J--> 131 indicates that the course number changed from 196J to 131).

Physical Description: 4 record cartons

Series Scope and Content Summary

The Women's Studies Program vigorously promoted the study of women in the core curriculum at SJSU, provided leadership to the other CSU campuses, maintained a national presence on issues related to women, and worked collaboratively with the National Women's Studies Association. This series documents the activities, programs, organizations, and scholarship of the faculty and students. Some of the formats represented include audio/visual and photographic materials, memorabilia, outside organization and program files, promotional material, and writings and bibliographic sources from students and faculty. They also collected program and newsletter information from other CSU campus programs and local and out-of-state universities, as well as from women's organizations such as the Association of Women in Science, the Berkshire Conference of Women Historians, and the Coalition of Labor Union Women. The WSP also participated on the Santa Clara Commission on the Status of Women, produced survey reports, tracked legislation, and followed the development of other commissions in the state and nationally.
