Improving state-mandated 'Reasonable Efforts': Innovative strategies to improve outcomes for families attempting reunification with children placed in foster care.

Dr. D'Andrade's recent research work focuses on the process of reunification between parents and their children placed in foster care. Her studies provide a deeper understanding of the problems that parents attempting reunification confront, and explore challenges in the social service system designed to help parents resolve their problems. Findings have implications for public agencies and communities hoping to improve outcomes for children and families. Dr. D'Andrade is an associate professor in the School of Social Work in the College of Applied Sciences and Arts (CASA), and director of the CASA Center for Applied Research in Human Services (CARHS).
