Seniors Are Addressed at Orientation Thursday by Miss Innes

A speech by Miss Innes was the main feature of Senior Orientation Thursday morning in the Little Theater. She announced that for the next three weeks she will interview senior students. Some helpful hints on how to write letters of application were given. Miss Innes gave some interesting facts about people who have recently received positions. Thirty positions are now vacant, but practically none of them are in Junior High. Co-operation of the senior class in doing their part will be a great help to the faculty.

Placement depends a lot on the individual or the applicant.

An announcement of the results of the intra-mural was to the effect that the seniors had won five

STUDENT BODY HOP TO BE HELD IN WOMEN'S GYM TONIGHT

A choice of two dances will be open to State College students this week-end.

Tonight there will be a regular Student Body dance in the Women's Gymnasium, open to all students with student body cards. 25 cents will be charged to outsiders coming with escorts.

Saturday night, at the conclusion of the basketball games, another dance will be open to the student body, also in the Women's Gym, at the nominal cost of 10 cents.

Both dances are to be taken care of by the hard-working and conscientious Student Affairs Chairman, Dario Simoni.

Dr. Peterson Addresses Freshmen Orientation

Dr. Peterson, of the State College Science department, was the speaker at Freshman Orientation yesterday morning, choosing as his subject, "Chemistry in Our Modern Life."

Discussing particularly the use of synthetic materials that are being substituted in our modern life for the real article, he stressed that the former are usually of superior quality. He exposed some of the popular fallacies concerning the manufacturing of present day materials and products.

Dealing briefly with the subject of the depression, Dr. Peterson advanced the theory that our present period of economic laxity is due, not to the fact that we are living in a machine age, but because we, as human beings, have not been able to make our social readjustments.

The business meeting, presided over by Dan Feeley, was of brief duration, as the secretary was absent and there was no particular business to discuss. Roy Steffen, vice president of the class, was in charge of the program, which also included numbers by Jack Fidanque playing the saw, and his musical spoons. His selections received enthusiastic applause and there were urgent requests for an encore, which was given.

games and lost four. It was announced that Assemblyman C. C. Cottrell will speak at the next senior orientation.

April 21 Is Date Of Spardi Gras; Classes Excused

Spardi Gras This Year To Surpass Former Events,
Students Believe

The word Spardi Gras immediately brings to mind the pleasant memories of an entire day spent in hilarity on San Jose State's campus. This year's event will by far surpass all previous Spardi Gras in point of preparation, entertainment, and numbers. The date is April 21. While this may seem a bit distant to you, the event will be so huge that committees have already been working for over a month arranging the elaborate details of the memorable day.

Here is the idea: In connection with the regularly scheduled Spardi Gras, a carnival will be held, lasting all day long. Dr. MacQuarrie has excused classes for the entire day in order that we may enjoy ourselves to the fullest extent. Those of you who are upper classmen remember the highly successful event that Student Body President Leon Warmke staged at high school, in order that the deficit treasury might be strengthened. This is his idea here at State. While the treasury isn't exactly deficit, our budget has been cut so low that it is impossible to give the students anything for nothing, so it is with this idea in mind that the carnival is being staged. All committees have been picked, and arrangements will be on a strictly organization basis; that is, each organization of school will take charge of different phases of the carnival. In this manner, more co-operation is assured on the part of the students, and the movement will be a student one rather than an individual one. Complete committees, details, and plans will be announced in a later issue of the Times.

Junior Wilson, senior, has been appointed general chairman of the Spardi Gras Carnival day. Leon Warmke is to be the supervising chairman, and there will be seven hard-working sub-chairmen under the capable leadership of these two men. Remember to hold the date, Friday, April 21.

State Students Asked To Return Crutches

The Health Department requests that all students who have borrowed crutches from Miss McFadden or from the Health Cottage return them immediately. Three pair of crutches have disappeared from the Health Cottage and two pair from the Health Office of the Woman's Gymnasium. If these crutches are not returned it will be necessary to charge a rental fee in the future. Students please be reasonable with your colleagues and return your crutches as soon as you have finished with them.

N. O. THMOAS,

Spartan Cagers Lose To Aggies By 56-37 Score

LOCALS UNABLE TO HALT
DAVIS; TEAMS MEET
HERE SATURDAY

By Gil Bishop

With their characteristic fortune of meeting teams at their peak, the Spartans dropped the first of a two-game series to the Cal Aggies last night at Davis. The final count was 56-37, a score that leaves little unsaid. With Peres, Dobbas and Carl Stevens dropping them in from all angles, an exceedingly "hot" Aggie five succeeded in crashing through a wan Spartan defense to keep a large lead at all stages of the game.

State took their only lead in the game in the first few seconds when "Cec" George dropped in a long floor shot. This was quickly nullified by Peres, Aggie forward, who caged three buckets in a row. From then on the Davis men were never headed, running up a 28-18 score at half time, with Peres scoring 12 digits in the first stanza. The second half was a repetition of the first, with the Spartans fighting hard all the way but "Crip" Toomey's men kept the net swishing.

Coach McDonald started a new five of Hague, Concannon, Rea, Leibbrandt, and George, which functioned well for a while, but it was a case of too much Peres and Co.

Bart Concannon led the San Jose point scorers with eight points. For the Aggies Peres was high with 17 markers. Captain Stevens followed with 16.

The box score:

San Jose	Fg.	Ft.	Pts.
Concannon, f	3	2	8

Mr. Broyles To Address Forum Monday Night

Sales Tax Issue Will Be Economist's Topic at Discussion

Following in a line of lectures to be delivered by various members of the faculty of the Econ department, Professor Broyles will speak to the Forum Monday evening at 7:30 p. m.

The subject of Mr. Broyle's talk is "Should America Adopt the Sales Tax?" This question is of vast importance to the nation today and is an issue that faces many of the State Legislatures. Mr. Broyle's talk should be both interesting and informative, and any student, faculty member, or outsider, is invited to attend the meeting.

At the close of Mr. Broyle's introduction to the subject, the audience will participate in an open forum discussion of the issue.

Last week, it will be remembered, the Forum enjoyed an excellent talk in a similar vein by Dr. Hugo Staffebach of the Commerce department, and the week previous to that, an analysis of Technocracy by Prof. Bill Poytress, head of the Econ department.

Pre-Med Society Hears Dr. Charles Lanne Talk at Meeting Wednesday

"Tuberculosis is a family disease. We should attack it there and sacrifice the confidence of the family for the benefit of the public," stated Dr. Charles Lanne at the Pre-Med Club at their last meeting, Wednesday, January 25.

Dr. Lanne added, "T. B. is not hereditary. Only the traits that make a people susceptible are hereditary. The Jewish people are very infrequently heard of as having the disease. For generations they have been exposed to conditions which have made them very resistant to the disease. On the other hand, Filipinos are very quick to succumb. Negroes from Africa, also, cannot resist the disease, but those who have been here for some time are becoming adapted to resisting tuberculosis."

The tuberculin test now used is said to be 80% sure. X-Ray will determine if you have the disease. Ultimately, the educational system will probably require that all teachers and all nurses will be X-Rayed and given a certificate to show that they have been X-Rayed and found all right.

There was a good turnout for the meeting and it was concluded to be one of the best yet held.

MUST THE SCHOOLS PAY?

Of vital importance to every State College student is the budget recommendation submitted to the State Legislature by the State Director of Finance. In view of the slashes already effected by directors of the respective colleges, his report is dangerous to the maintenance of our educational system.

His attitude seems to indicate that the educational facilities of the state should be seriously impaired in order that the Legislature may balance the budget.

However, our legislators thus far have failed to be fooled into believing that his recommendation is the best solution of the problem.

The corporations of California seek to take advantage of economic conditions and make the schools the "goat" of their budget plans. But the people refused to be duped. It is true that they are clamoring for lower taxes, but not at the price of their educational system. There is only one wolf at the school's door, and that wolf is the corporation group.

Why should we tolerate a tuition fee? The fees would go to the general fund of the state and be used for purposes other than education. This would not reduce school taxes. The fee would work a tremendous hardship on a class that is not able to pay. Such a fee would force many students in this magnificent state, world-renowned for its splendid educational facilities, to leave school. The director's recommendations is clearly not one of the people.

There is only one avenue for us to take. We must write our legislators and assure them that the demand of the corporations is not the people's voice. In unity there is strength, and to mass the people's opinions is necessary if the small, highly-organized corporation group is to be defeated.

Tomorrow may be too late! Act immediately!

COLLEGE VULGARIANISM

Another phase of Barbarianism, as displayed by college students, is the manner in which students exhibit their wonderful knowledge of social etiquette and appreciation of cultured finesse. It is pitiful, the way our professors must compete with a host of loquacious vulgarians who collect in the back of the lecture rooms and see how much noise they can make. Whenever the clock nears the end of the hour, there is immediately a scuffling of chairs, a snapping of binders, banging of books, etc., and in some cases, I have seen students rise unceremoniously and stampede for the door. The tail of the lecture is absolutely lost. Most of the students go to the lectures and are as restless as a bunch of children who are forced to sit still in church and attend Sunday school.

College was once an institution to give an individual who showed the slightest signs of intelligence, a polish. There is no culture in our modern universities. Only vulgarism and loud-mouthedness. Our educational institutions are turning out ill-bred egoists, babbling politicians, and blundering athletes. One learns only how to become two-faced, step on someone else for personal welfare, and develop a profound inconceivable selfishness. —O. U.

COWBELLS AND HARMONY

Evidently no one with sufficient authority has yet seen fit to remove those abominable cow-bells from the gymnasium during basketball. We realize that it satisfies a certain adolescent passion in those who do the ringing of it, but it is certainly anything but satisfying to the spectators who have to listen to it, and to the players, none of whom I have yet found who seem to enjoy it. Won't someone please take the matter in hand and get rid of it? The thing is reminiscent of barbarianism. It is high-schoolish, cheap and totally annoying. —O. U.

Just Among Ourselves

Note—This column is personal between the president and the college. Outsiders are requested not to make use of the material.

Odd little quip that makes us say or do something questionable in front of our friends when we wouldn't say or do it anywhere else. Sense of freedom, bit of a desire to entertain by shocking. Passed a group of young men on the campus recently and overheard some utterly filthy language. Occasionally overheard low-brow remarks on the playground, or in locker rooms. Not much that one can do about it, as any correction must come from the individuals themselves. But it's a very bad habit, just a simple, childish showing off. Inflates one's ego to challenge a taboo. Accustomed to rotten stories and indecent language in the small home town perhaps, and it carries over here. I'm sure many fine students seriously resent such an imposition, but they can't say anything. One might put in a kick about a bad B. O., but a bad L. O. (Language odor) is ten times worse, and we seem to have to stand it in silence. Just a bad habit and we should get rid of it. College people should be able to express themselves in forceful, entertaining, even shocking English without passing the bounds of good taste. In the army, where the lid's off on just about everything, swearing and indecency are common. But even there, some soldiers object. In my own company so many objected that the men passed a resolution of their own accord that all such rotten language should be excluded from the barracks. Under military regulations, it was easy to enforce. An order did it, and offenders were given week-end K. P. (Kitchen Police).

Now's the time to get rid of your bad language habits. If you really are a roughneck, you can show it without hurting the feelings of your friends.

Peter was captain of the second company from mine. The four captains in a battalion became great friends, and we liked Peter. He was a fine soldier. He'd been a high school principal and felt he had something to live down. Thought somehow or other that the men would question his courage, his manhood, if he didn't "go the limit." Had never smoked, even, but he started in to smoke, swear, drink, and otherwise announce his emancipation. We sort of laughed at him, it seemed so unnatural. The pose didn't fit. When the first barrage came over Peter was in his dugout, and two lieutenants of his men under digging trenches in No-Man's land. At the first crash Peter jumped for the latter. In a moment he was in the thick of it, in another moment he was killed. Peter was no coward. He had the finest courage, finest sense of responsibility. He didn't need to shock any one. We all recognized his good quality. Dear old Peter, I wish he were living now.

Lord Leicester lit a cigarette and blue the whirls of smoke into the beams of sunshine where they took on a bluish tinge.

The Duchess, being the perfect hostess, rang for her footman. "Oh Meadows, do bring us something to drink. What would you like, Harry?"

"I'll have an absinthe, Duchess."

"One absinthe and a vermouth, Meadows," said the Duchess.

Lord Leicester sauntered over to the ivan and picked up a pillow and threw it at the Duchess.

"Why, Harry, how could you?"

At that moment Meadows returned with the tray of drinks. Lord Leicester helped himself. "Absinthe makes the heart grow fonder, Duchess, he declaimed.

"I still regret the absinthe of Lady Agatha," said the Duchess.

The footman picked up the tray of drinks. "What have you there Meadows?" asked Lord Leicester.

"A tray of drinks, sir," replied the footman.

Caliban's Columnies

(Incongruous Inya Window)

"You look quite charming today, Duchess," said Lord Leicester in a smooth voice, as he strolled across the room and gazed out of the window.

The Duchess fluttered. Compliments from Lord Leicester were quite rare, she revelled in them. "It's so nice of you to come to tea, Harry," she said. "Times are so dull in London these days, and it is a genuine pleasure to have someone as charming as yourself to entertain my guests!"

"Your guests are rather late in coming, Duchess. It seems to be the fad nowadays to be late to teas."

"Don't tease, Harry," smirked the Duchess, then added, "I invited poor Lady Agatha, but she is unfortunately tied up with her new salon. It is quite distressing, all our best people are going in for common business in these times."

"I shall miss the presence of Lady Agatha's absence," murmured Lord Leicester.

Lady Agatha looked troubled. "The presence of her absence," she warbled. "Why, Harry, that is rather paradoxical. I would say the absence of her presence. After all absence is a minus quantity, how can there be a presence of that which is not?"

"No, Duchess, presence is a positive condition and cannot be treated in a negative manner. Her presence is her presence, and if it is presence, how can there be the absence of it. No it can only be the presence of her absence."

"But, Harry," the Duchess was evidently quite confused. "Absence is absence, a negative quality and cannot be treated in a positive manner. If we possess her absence, we cannot say there is the presence of that which is not."

"Words of wisdom," sighed Lord Leicester, "I abhor logic."

The Duchess was hurt. In fact she was embarrassed. "Well, Harry," she gargled, "you are really a bad influence on one's morals."

Lord Leicester lit a cigarette and blue the whirls of smoke into the beams of sunshine where they took on a bluish tinge.

The Duchess, being the perfect hostess, rang for her footman. "Oh Meadows, do bring us something to drink. What would you like, Harry?"

"I'll have an absinthe, Duchess."

"One absinthe and a vermouth, Meadows," said the Duchess.

Lord Leicester sauntered over to the ivan and picked up a pillow and threw it at the Duchess.

"Why, Harry, how could you?"

At that moment Meadows returned with the tray of drinks. Lord Leicester helped himself. "Absinthe makes the heart grow fonder, Duchess, he declaimed.

"Well, all I have is a deuce of a thirst, so you take the pot."

Lancelot Featherstonehaugh, sipped serenely at his brandy-and-soda. Lord Flushbottom pawed the carpet with the point of his silver-headed cane. "Life is dull," he said, "the only exciting people left are Americans, and they are slowly dying of thirst."

"Thirst in war, thirst in peace, and thirst in the hearts of their countrymen," murmured Lancelot, throwing a bowl of goldfish at his friend so hard that the latter dropped his monocle into his bowl of clam chowder.

COMMUNICATIONS

Editor College Times:

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one part of a people to dissolve the social bands which have connected it with the other part, and to assume among the couples at a dance a separate and independent station to which the laws of Nature and of Nature's god never intended them, a decent respect to the opinions of their fellow students requires that they should declare the cause which impels them to their separation.

Prudence, indeed, will dictate that customs long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and, accordingly, all experience has shown that womenkind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But, once a lone sheep seems to be the case, as men like to show their prestige by appearing attractive to an escorted girl. To right the situation let these facts be submitted to a candid world.

The stagline members have consistently refused to dance with unescorted girls.

They have concentrated their attention on girls who already have dates in the fear of appearing unable to compete with the "dated" girl's escort.

The man to woman ratio here is such that every boy could without undue effort find at least one co-ed who would consent to his escort.

It has been necessary to import escorts at various functions because of the evident aloofness on the part of the State fellows.

The correction of the situation lies entirely in the hands of the men because of the advantage they have in that leap year comes only once in four years.

We have stated the situation as it appears to us, and, we hope, fairly. We, therefore, present this declaration in hope that we may derive improvement of the situation thereby.

Stanford Co-eds Brave Icy Waters in Effort To Encourage Romance

Ignoring the possibility of contracting pneumonia in favor of inviting romance, two Stanford co-eds dove into the icy water of Lake Lagunita on the campus recently.

A tradition at Stanford holds that the first girl, or girls, to swim in Lake Lagunita each year will receive a proposal of marriage before June. Acting on a dare, the girls tested the tradition.

The romance-hungry co-eds were Beulah Dimmit and Josephine Wilson, Alpha Omicron Pi sorority sisters. After their daring feat they were congratulated by Marjorie Rust, the first girl to swim in 1932, and who was rewarded with a proposal two months later.

First Case of Literary Kidnapping Is Recorded in New Orleans Lately

A case termed by police as the first "literary kidnapping" on record was brought up in New Orleans recently against Allen Johnson, former philosophy student at Stanford University.

Johnson, charged with "abducting" the Life of Julius Caesar, written by the Emperor Napoleon III, from the public library in New Orleans, is now thinking it over in jail. The books were taken January 6th, and a note left in their place, saying they would be returned upon payment of a 1500 dollar "ransom," and the library was directed to advertise in the newspapers for their return.

Eleven responses followed an advertisement placed January 22, but it was not until January 23 that police traced the phone call to the person saying he held the books.

The librarian held the wire for fifteen minutes while police traced the call.

Gridders To Play California Ramblers

Weber Date

By Steve Murdock

San Jose State's "Big Time" football affiliations for the Fall of 1933 were further increased when Coach Dud De Groot and Athletic Manager Webster J. Benton announced that the Spartans will meet the newly formed University of California Ramblers in San Jose on either the 21st or the 28th of October.

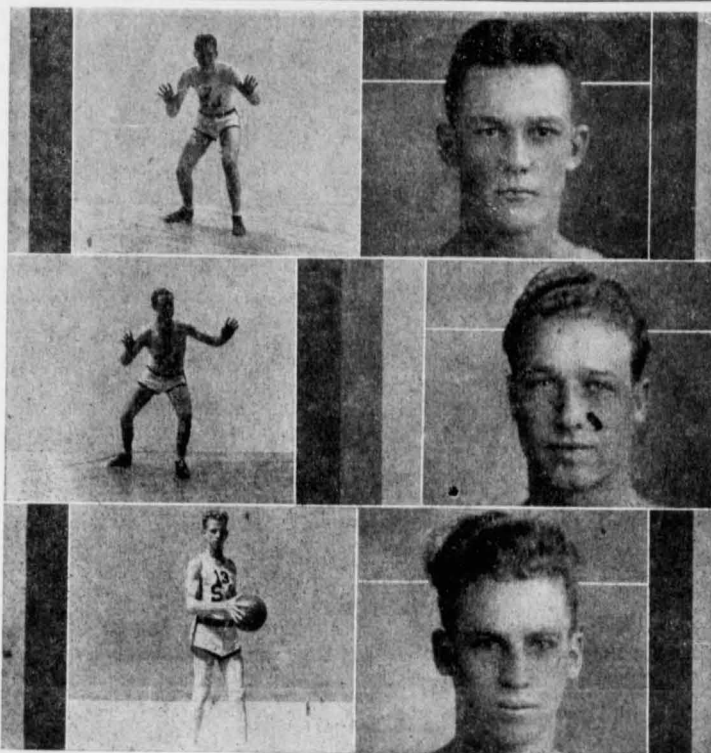

The Ramblers represent an innovation in Pacific Coast football on the part of the University of California. According to the present plan 35 men will be chosen to make up the regular California Golden Bear Varsity. The remaining men out for football, exclusive of the Frosh, will be moulded into a team which will approximate the strength of the teams in the Far Western Conference. This outfit will play most of its games away from home, leaving the stadium to the varsity. Hence the name Ramblers. This plan has been worked in the Middle West for several years with great success. Notre Dame in particular has made a go of the idea. The California and Stanford "Goof" squads have been the nearest thing to this on the coast heretofore, but they have never held the status of an individual team with a complete schedule. Their function has been to serve as cannon fodder for the varsity with a few outside games thrown in for amusement. The new idea provides for a team entirely independent of the varsity. Jimmy Hole, for two years assistant to Ingram, will probably handle the Ramblers.

The date is still uncertain, pending final arrangements of the Weber College game in Ogden. When settlement is made with the Utah team, the California aggregation will accept the remaining date. This provides San Jose fans with five fine home games for next fall. In order of their appearance, the visiting teams will be San Francisco State, College of Pacific (Stadium opener), California Ramblers, California Aggies, and Fresno State. In addition, followers of the Spartans will only have to journey the few short miles that lie between San Jose and Palo Alto on September 23rd, to see the battle of the century, when Coach De Groot's charges tangle with "Tiny" Thornhill's Stanford Indians.

Intra-Mural

By Dick Bertrandias

And now comes the big Splash! Preparations are being worked up for the mammoth Intra-Mural Swimming meet. Next week will be devoted to signing men up for this affair. In this case see Coach Walker only, as he wishes to place you in the events. Now is the time to start training, and don't forget that it usually necessitates good condition to win any kind of a swimming event. All men are eligible, except those out for varsity. More about this later.

The entire meet will be run off in one evening, so it won't take much of your time. Get in the Swim!

All right, fellows, today is the last day to play off your matches in the intra-mural foul shooting tourney, so find your opponent hand in the results to Coach Walker. Next week will find the second round of the tourney getting under way.

By this time we should have a pretty good idea on who the final participaters will be in the basketball tournament. However, I refuse to incriminate myself as there is always such a thing as an upset. Maybe I'll have some ideas by next week. This time you figure it out for yourself.

Famous! ast words. Aw, these guys are a push-over.—Toby McLachlan.

Hell's Bells and Shades of Hades! Am I in a mess? There's a certain red-headed gal around this institution who has been coxing in a rather insistent manner that I sponsor, advocate, and advertise a proposed polo team. Now, in the first place, I don't know anything about polo; and in the second place, this is somewhat out of my line. Please, somebody, send some suggestions or timely aid to a tortured soul, quick!

Listen, gal, let's compromise and try water polo. They do that at Illinois and it proved a big success.

BASEBALL TEAM PLAYS CONTINUATION HI TODAY

Barring rain, snow, and anything else that may happen, the Varsity baseball team will meet the Continuation Hi nine today at 4 o'clock. Lineups and batteries are not known, as the Varsity has had but one practice since the rain.

Santa Clara Scheduled For Freshmen Saturday

After a weeks layoff from two preliminary contests last Friday and Saturday nights, the Frosh will again enter the floor of battle Saturday night when they engage the Santa Clara High five in a return game. The game will be a preliminary to the Cal Aggie contest and will start at the usual time, 6:45.

The local Babes were rather hard hit earlier in the week but seem to be rounding back into shape. Rose, dependable second string guard, twisted an ankle against the Varsity in scrimmage and will be on the doubtful list Saturday night when the two teams take the court. Al Lindner is also limping around on a pair of weak dogs, but should manage to get up enough steam to start the fracas against the Panthers. Carl Biddle has been bothered with a bad knee, but should also

Spartan Spasms

By Murdock and Bishop

Football Captain Bud Bhard who, in his spare time, plays basketball for the San Jose Aggies and runs the quarter mile for Coach Blesh's track team, expects to push Track Captain Taylor for his laurels this year. Last season Bud turned in some pretty good performances in the 440 yard grind. With the soft condition of the local track hindering his particular style of running, he showed up to his advantage on the hard surface of the Sacramento Municipal Stadium oval where the Conference meet was held. In that memorable race last May which Taylor won by a flea's eyebrow, Bud was right on the "Greyhound's" heels and went unplaced. It was by the best race of his career, if he picks up where he left off last May the Spartan's lightning-like Captain will have to come on the steam to break the tie ahead of the hard-working Bhard. The new cinder surface now being laid at Spartan Field ought to aid the Football Captain's pounding style of running which was deadened by the former sandy surface.

We see that Marshall Wells for two years a sterling sportsman at Sacramento J. C., is now attending U. S. C., and that Dean Cromwell is counting on him, along with Les Ball and Charlie Parsons, to carry on the tradition of great U. S. C. men which began away with another Parsons and come on down through names as Paddock, Draper, Rah, and Wykoff. We want that Wells' name will follow those of Donadio, Sim, Parsons, and Beard, all recent Sacramento Jaycee boys who have made the limelight in the "Time."

Coach Erwin Blesh took his pole vaulters to the city the other day where they invaded the warehouses of the various sporting goods concerns and selected their poles for the coming track campaigns. We understand that the bamboo articles were thoroughly satisfied with their new acquisitions.

We are still awaiting developments on the Amos Alonzo Stagg College of Pacific situation. We hope that the venerable "Old Man" is not suffering from any delusions regarding California weather in the region around Stockton. What with the lately cold winters; the damp, the impregnable tule fogs; and the sweltering summers Mr. Stagg would not find the valley location much different from the shores of Lake Michigan if it is a change in climate he is looking for.

be able to sink his quota of points. Eddie Wing has evidently recovered from the injured eye he received as a present from the Los Angeles team, although he still sports a large shiner on the sore spot. In the first game played at Santa Clara, the Frosh ambled in to a lopsided win, but the Panthers determined to make a better showing on the larger Spartan court. The Babes will probably start with Wing and Arnerich as guards, Biddle at center, with Citti and Lindner at forwards.
