San Jose State University President Mary Papazian announced a majority of Fall 2021 classes will have elements of in-person learning and addressed community members’ grievances regarding Gregory Johnson (a death in Wednesday’s Associated Students Board of Directors meeting). Papazian said 50-75% of classes will have some form of in-person or hybrid learning.

"The hope is to be far more in person and aligned with the governor's recommendation to open the state by June 15," Papazian said. "A lot of it depends on vaccination access."

Papazian also said officials are "working really hard" to make campus a vaccination site for Santa Clara County. Advocates for Johnson expressed disappointment with Papazian in the Zoom chat during her update. "How is she able to talk casually about anything else than Gregory?" alumna Patricia Emaudi wrote.

Supporters interrupted Papazian and voiced frustrations with her inaction and lack of accountability in Johnson’s case.

Johnson was a former SJSU student who was found dead in the basement of the Sigma Chi fraternity house in 2008.

For you (Papazian) to come in here and act like you didn't know something like this would happen was absolutely disrespectful.

— Lou Dimes, president, Black Liberation and Collective Action Community Support

For you [Papazian] to come in here and act like you didn’t know something like this would happen was absolutely disrespectful, said Lou Dimes, president of the Black Liberation and Collective Action Community Support, which was one of the groups that pushed for Papazian to come to a meeting devoted to the Johnson & Johnson vaccine.

“Someone let her know that Mrs. Johnson is here waiting on her once again,” one of the messages read. “I had little to no faith she would show up honestly,” said Julius Meldon, a radio, TV and film sophomore in a phone call after the meeting. “I was reassuring that she could even show up during the Feb. 24 meeting, I was incredibly mad.”

When the CDC paused the vaccine supply Tuesday, she said she was receiving the Johnson & Johnson vaccine on March 6 and said despite the rare blood clots reported, the vaccine is safer than contracting the COVID-19 virus.

“People are coming in telling me they didn’t ignore the calls we’ve been making not just for the past several months, but the calls that this family has been making for the past 13 years for you to at least acknowledge the murder of Gregory Johnson that happened at {SJSU} is beyond insulting,” Dimes told the director.

Biochemistry sophomore Kaitlin Miller said she felt like she was waiting upon her vaccination appointment Friday when the health care provider told her she was receiving the Johnson & Johnson vaccine.

“I didn’t want to get this vaccine because of the lack of data,” Miller said in a text. “I wanted to turn back and learn to come when they were distributing a different vaccine, but appointments were so hard to come across . . . I knew I needed to get it done and also felt like the fight of the group of women who developed blood clots was finally happening. When the CDC paused the vaccine supply Tuesday, she said she was filled with fear because she “knew something like this would happen” and also felt the fight of the group of women who developed blood clots was finally happening.

“East San Jose and south county communities are facing barriers to vaccine access, language, digital literacy, transportation and information which are preventing them from accessing the vaccine. “Santa Clara County has been in the orange tier since March 24. In the orange tier, retail stores and shopping centers are open at 100 percent capacity while places of worship, restaurants, movie theaters, museums, zoos and aquariums are open at 50 percent and gyms and fitness centers are open at 25 percent. “As much as we have this good news right now, we still need to remain vigilant,” Lee said. “Getting the vaccine does not mean you’re safe. After vaccines, you need a second dose and you have to wait a couple of weeks after the second dose to be fully vaccinated.” Lee said the important thing is to continue wearing masks and practicing safety protocols.

My intense craving to scarf down a spicy chicken sandwich drove my dog and I to Scratch Cookery Thursday afternoon. Almost no one around to delay me from immersing myself in delicious food.

I was initially bit lost looking for the eatery because I expected to find a chicken and a beer. Scratch Cookery food truck is typically located only four minutes away from campus near South First Street and opened Thursday through Sunday.

Although it’s at a temporary location, the restaurant had a mellow ambience. Its outdoor patio had pleasant background music which added to the mellow ambience. I was greeted by friendly employees who aren’t as well-equipped to handle the heat. It deserves more recognition and is definitely worth the time to check out, but be aware that you wear clothes you aren’t afraid of ruining with a little sauce.

Scratch Cookery has the best chicken sandwiches that are juicy and savory. They cater to those who aren’t as well-equipped to handle the spice and those who love the heat. The first thing I ordered was fries. I was surprised at the quality of them. They were perfectly crispy without being overly oily and were cutely shaped almost like a moon.

Nashville Hot chicken sandwiches

Next I ordered the two most popular items, according to one of the waiters: the Grilled Cheese Nashville Hot with Texas Toast at a level two spice, and the Nashville Hot Chicken Sandwich at a level zero spice, which is basically coated in black pepper.

The two sandwiches are essentially the same but the latter had a brioche bun rather than Texas toast and cheese.

Both sandwiches were garnished; they were way bigger than my Chihuahua head so I was quite intimidated.

Masturbation: highest form of self-love

Influencer apologies are downright performative

Masturbation: highest form of self-love

This form of self-love may also boost your self-esteem because you’re spending time getting to know your body.

The Body article: "For some reason, I myself was never told that masturbation was OK. But at the same time, I saw it was almost normalized for males. It’s like women’s desires have been suppressed while men’s have been glorified, particularly in the media."

The Verge article: "Charles is desperate, but as a female myself, I was shocked. If you want to stop a celebrity or an up-and-coming influencer from having power. You hear about the same problems repeatedly, it may make you feel triggers your anxiety, it may make you sad."

Folowing: Jacqueline Vela

This doesn’t mean that you should stop practicing self-love or that you should be ashamed of engaging in sexual activity. Masturbation can be a healthy and safe way to explore your boundaries and learn about your body.

Money, power and fame are not the only factors that influence the way people view masturbation. For many, it can be a form of self-care, a way to connect with themselves and others.

Everyone knows there are biological differences between men and women, but women's athleticism is just as valuable as men's.

The U.S. women's women's soccer team deserves equal pay.

The U.S. women's soccer team has fought for equal payment since 2019. The women cited lower pay, worse working conditions and improper treatment as part of the reason for their lawsuit against the U.S. Soccer Federation, according to a December 1, 2019 NPR article.
