Co-eds Return To Their Childhoods for Annual Jinx

At Rose Café, the annual Jinx begins tonight with the signal for a concealed cocktail party. It will be listed in the program of the San Jose Players' presentation of 'Silver Cord,' which begins tonight at 8:30 and continues tomorrow. The drama was presented in the recent Markham Poetry Club, which will be sponsored on Friday at 7:30. The program will be held at the Arena Theatre and includes a large number of alumni members from the Markham Drama Club. The company consists of more than 25 members, and they are the first to produce a play in the Markham Theatre, which was dedicated Saturday—THE FIELD—April 17.

The collection consists of pictures, books, and manuscripts of the work and property of the late Dr. Bland, purchase of which went through the efforts of the San Jose and the Markham Poetry Club. Among the manuscripts of other organizations, there are the works and property of the late Dr. Bland, purchase of which was made by John Watson, the actor who has been called back again and again for artistic and appreciative representation. Mrs. Gillis is remembered by the good friends of his own productions, Miss Edith Power, and was featured in a more informal and intimate role. The programme was given by the late Dr. Bland, purchase of which was made by Miss Althea Cremer. The dedicatory address was delivered by Mrs. Carl Holladay, State college.

It is a character which she has sacrificed her entire life for her children and expects them to sacrifice theirs for her satisfaction. Do You Travel?

Probably the most wonderful haven for birds in this vicinity is Paradise Valley, near Moran, Wyo. Friday might reign the "Silver Cord," an opera composed by a young student of our college, the first opera ever written here. Perhaps it is a little difficult to understand, but I think the story is well told. The plot is about a young girl who is left an orphan and a destitute child. One day, while wandering through the woods, she comes upon an old woman who takes her under her roof. The old woman teaches the girl how to read and write, and eventually helps her become a successful opera singer. This opera was heavily embroidered with a spot of Reason, and the old woman's wisdom is evident throughout. However, I would say that the opera is not perfect, but it certainly is a good attempt at a stage production.

I am going to see "The Silver Cord" this Thursday and will report my impressions to you. In the meantime, I must get back to my studies and prepare for my next exam. Good luck with your studies! If you need any help, feel free to ask.

The Editor

"Death keeps a tavern
Strangely built and fair
And bids those who now many a welcome guest."

The doctrines of Schopenhauer have been preached too often in the last few years by short-sighted college professors who passed not to consider the effects that these pessimistic philosophies might have on the impressionable mentalities of students, who, reading for the first time that "life is but one dark hour, it might take it upon themselves to put into effect the faintly veiled edicts of these great philosophers by ending their existences."

The age of the college freshman and sophomore has been recognized by most authorities as the most dangerous in the life of the average human being, for it is then, when young mentalities are just beginning to blossom into the light of true reason, when they are for the first time comprehending their actual status in life, that a word of misguidance may result in such dire consequences as this college has witnessed during the last month.

Into the lives of all college students come periods when we wonder if, "after all, it's really worth the struggle." The more brilliant the student, the more acute the reaction seems to be. Times of depression overwhelm their marks, and in the average cases do no lasting damage. But men and women grow older, and as the unsettled period passes life seems sweeter and more complete. The elders gaze into the past and laugh, with a bit of wonder, at the problems which in their youth stirred their souls. They remember the day the sweetheart married another; the day the daughter was to enter the world. They laugh and feel better for it. We will then be faced with new worries and joys, and will well laugh at our problems of today.

Sappho Society Fetes Rushes Last Week

Sappho society of San Jose State college entertained at a series of delightful parties during the rushing season which has just been completed. The ladies of the society members last Friday night. About fifty members, faculty and alumni, attended and some interesting questions affecting the future plans of the organization were considered. Too premature for general discussion, the plans promised to be of extreme interest to all members, as well as to the college as a whole.

Kendrick Hall, as the oldest member’s honor organization on the campus, has passed through an interesting history during the past seventeen years. Started on a small scale first branch as an idea under the vocal leadership of Rock Park; it has continued to rise and grow, and at the present time its membership numbers approximately thirty-five men. It was a well-conducted event which greeted the eyes of the guests but Friday night for during the past six months, this organization has completely renovated its “Sanctum.” Its modernistic furnishings and furniture would do credit to any college club room.

The party was opened with a recital by Patricia Ladd, followed by several group songs which were quite skillfully to his voice. Perhaps its outstanding number was “Whistle Down the Wind,” by Brahm, and given by three other members, also with four songs, one especially, “Home,” by Manning, proving one of the best of the evening.
